SPEEDERS HIT RIG; OCCUPANT INJURED

MRS. MARVIN MILFORD SERIOUSLY HURT IN ACCIDENT NORTH OF CITY THIS AFTERNOON.

Collarbone Was Broken and Woman Was Badly Bruised About the Head and Face As Result of Being Thrown Out When Car Struck.

Mrs. Marvin Milford, while driving in a single rid through the stone quarry on the Indian Ford road north of the city about one o'clock this afternoon was struck by a large canvas yellow colored roadster, and was thrown from the buggy, breaking her collarbone and badly bruising her about the head and face. The car was running at a rapid rate estimated by some to be as fast as fifty miles an hour. Following the accident they were not stopped, but proceeded on their break-neck speed without looking behind.

Mrs. Milford was helped to a nearby farm house by a gentleman who was riding with her at the time the accident occurred, and Dr. W. H. Palmer was called to attend her. He found her in a serious condition, as she was severely bruised and shaken up as well as suffering from the broken collarbone. He was feared at first that she might be injured internally. Her husband, who is employed at the Jamesville Carriage Works, left for the scene of the accident immediately.

From descriptions of the car given by those who saw it directly after the accident, it is thought to be the same machine which arrived in Jamesville this morning from Rockford and which was owned and driven by a man named Robertson. The car which was seen in Jamesville was a powerful Hermon roadster painted a bright yellow.

The accident occurred in one of the curves of the quarry where it was especially hard to drive out of the way for a machine approaching at such a high rate of speed as this car is reported to have been going. There were two occupants in the car at the time Mrs. Milford was struck.

Both the chief of police here and the sheriff were informed of the accident and they began a search at once for the reckless autoists. It was believed that they were on their way to Edgerton as they were seen about half way there subsequent to the accident. The destination of the car which was seen here this noon coinciding in description with the one which struck Mrs. Milford, was not known.

CONVICTED MAN IS SEEKING RE-TRIAL

Arguments Heard Today on Motion for New Trial of John M. Andrews of Warren, Pa., Convicted of Murder.

Warren, Pa., July 31.—Arguments were heard today by Judge Hinesley in this trial on the application for a new trial in the case of John M. Andrews, former superintendent of the Warren waterworks, convicted of the murder of Emilio Amann, one of his former subordinates. Owing to the many peculiar and highly mystifying features of the case the trial of Andrews attracted a great deal of attention throughout the state and the developments since the trial, upon which is based the motion for a new trial for the convicted man, have added materially to the mystery surrounding the case and to the statewide interest aroused by it.

The interesting history of the case dates back several years, and personal jealousies, and political and social intrigues seem to have played an important part in it. Andrews and Amann were friends several years ago, when both entered the field of politics and Andrews was out by being appointed superintendent of the Warren waterworks, which are owned by the American Water Works company of Pittsburgh, Pa., while Amann was assigned to a subordinate position. Amann's jealousy over the success of his former friend is said to have caused a serious breach in the relations of the two men.

Origin of Trouble. Two years ago a typhoid fever epidemic broke out in Warren, which caused the death of more than seventy persons. After the epidemic had been stamped out by heroic methods and the excitement somewhat subsided, Amann produced a tremendous sensation by pointing out that a foul and stagnant well, full of fever germs, had been allowed to drain into the reservoir and had thus contaminated the drinking water of the citizens of Warren.

Amann stated at the time that Andrews knew of that fact and had attempted to dam the connection between the well and the reservoir before the investigation could be made. So great was the indignation of the citizens against Andrews in consequence of Amann's statement, that there was an open talk of lynching him. Andrews, who was never very popular, as he was too exclusive, denied the truth of Amann's story and charged that it was Amann who had known of the well, but had never reported its existence, as he should have done. The investigation by the authorities showed that the well was responsible for the epidemic, but for some reason no legal steps were ever taken against Andrews or Amann.

Andrews Arrested. On March 25, 1910, President A. W. Lynn of the Water Works company arrived in Warren and, after a brief examination of the accounts of the case, which is said to have shown a discrepancy in the figures, he discharged Andrews, who was bonded for $3,000. There is a story that Amann, after a conference with Andrews, wrote and signed a confession, admitting that he and not Andrews was responsible for the shortage.

Some time in January of this year Amann's friends sought to persuade him to withdraw his alleged confession, and it is said that Amann promised to follow their advice. This was never done, however, for on the following night, January 27, 1911, Amann was killed by three shots from an automatic pistol, after he had visited the reservoir during a severe storm. There was a strong feeling against Andrews and a public suspecting him of having killed Amann. He was carefully watched for several days and finally arrested on the charge of murder.

CITY SYSTEM CHANGED

Milton Avenue Cars Will Run Down Franklin Street Hereafter—Same Schedule As Formerly.

At six o'clock tomorrow morning the first interurban car to run up Main street will arrive at the Myers House corner and from that time on the route into and out of the city will be on this line. The cars will run on the same schedule as formerly, arriving just before the hour and leaving promptly on the hour. The ticket office will be in the Myers Hotel, where an opening has been cut through into the old ladies entrance, which has been fitted up as a waiting room. For the present the heavier express cars will turn around on the "X" at the corner of Main and Milwaukee streets. However, as soon as the track is laid on North Main street the cars will run to the new freight house they have rented there from Peter L. Myers. For the present the heavier express and freight will be left at the car barns in Spring brook, while the lighter packages will either be delivered from the cars to the merchants they are consigned to, or taken to the company's present freight office on Franklin street.

General Manager W. C. Sparks of the Interurban company, was in the city today to complete plans for the transfer of the route. With the running of the cars up Main street, there will be a change in the city car lines. The present cars which run up Milton Avenue will not go down Main street at all, but will run to the corner of Franklin and Milwaukee and thence down that street to the city limits. They will meet the cars returning from the cemetery at the Northwestern depot. The whole system will be reorganized by the use of transfers, which are being printed for use. The cars will run in the present twenty minute schedule as at not to conflict with the interurban line, which will be on the hour for leaving and just a few minutes before for arriving.

JANESVILLE LOST CONVENTION BY A VERY CLOSE VOTE

State Association of Retail Liquor Dealers' Protective Association Will be Here in 1913

Janesville lost the 1912 state convention of the Wisconsin State Liquor Dealers' Protective Association by six votes, Watertown winning the coveted honor. However, Janesville will be considered for the gathering in 1913. Janesville was represented at the Ashland convention by John Flannery, Thomas McKelvie, Herman Higgs, Thomas Abbott, Edward Meyer and Al Teubner.

The meeting was most interesting and among the business transacted was the passage of the following resolution which the various members of the association are to see enforced.

The Principles Adopted.
They are as follows:
A declaration that the liquor business is an honorable, legitimate and necessary form of business activity, and is conducted by high-minded, self-respecting citizens who are not restricted by local enactments. A protest against the imposition of progressive or restrictive regulations and taxation.

A plan for the co-operation of all branches of the liquor business, for the elimination of any actual condition from which the business suffers. A protest against continued agitation to harass the liquor interests.

A declaration that prohibition and local option are one, and both failures. Prohibition, in any form, tends to the establishment of direct taxation, the illicit sale of liquor, the abridgment of liberty, discrimination against the poor, and in favor of the rich, the curtailment of revenues for schools and other public uses.

The Anti-Saloon league is a menace to good government, the guardian of communities and vested property rights, and exists for no other purpose than to provide occupation and revenue for the members of a close corporation, by the processes of perpetual agitation. Local option is perfunctory of property rights, without the presentation of any plan of compensation or the substitution of revenues to offset those that are proposed to be destroyed.

No Sales to Minors.
Asks the co-operation of the brewers, in the effort to weed out dealers who violate the law.

The sale of liquor to minors and habitual drunkards is deprecated, but there should be a law requiring written notice to the saloon keeper in the case of habitual drunkards.

Advocates the revocation of the license of any saloon keeper who uses immoral women to promote the sale of his goods, and also opposing the sale of liquor in immoral resorts.

Opposition to all trusts, pools, and illegal combinations. All corporations should be kept under strict supervision by the state and nation.

Urging the passage of limitation ordinances in every city, town, and village in Wisconsin.

A protest against brewers and manufacturers, selling out to private individuals, price lists, as tending to make the individual believe that he can get liquor cheaper where no license saloon exists. The names of the concerns will be made known, in order that they may not be patronized in their attempts to get trade, by "aiding the cause of prohibition."

Recommendation of all members to purchase union made supplies only. Recommending the passage of a law abolishing the present license granted to bottled beer drivers, compelling them to secure regular retail licenses.

An endorsement of the work of the German Alliance societies.

Make Business Necessary.
The duties of retail liquor dealers are to obey all ordinances, not to sell to minors, habituates, or habitual drunkards, or to women over the bar; to discontinue the unnecessary display of beer kegs and whiskey barrels; to discontinue the giving of Christmas presents to customers; so conduct the saloon as to make your neighbor feel that it is a necessity and not a hindrance; compel employees to conduct themselves properly and never allow under the influence of liquor; that the sale of beer in buckets to residents of the immediate neighborhood, and not to sell in a bucket to any promiscuous person to be drunk on the street.

Prevent disorderly language in the saloon, as well as loitering.

Exclude all indecent pictures or cards, and discourage all such pictures by advertisements.

[Special to the Gazette.]
Albany July 31.—As the result of the condition in which Marshal J. M. Gilbertson of this place was found on Saturday night, Albany is without a village marshal, although Night-watchman Tom Doolan is acting in that position for the time.

While the position of village marshal is to be filled by a temporary man in the strictest sense of the word, it seems that Marshal Gilbertson departed from that requirement last Saturday evening long enough to forget immediate duties and it is evident that trouble followed. There was a brawling south of the village and it is presumed that some of the toughs, who were present at the affair, offered liquor, which may or may not have dragged to the unseemly marshal. The encounter was too much and he ambled altogether too freely.

Rendered Unconscious.
After the marshal was defenseless from his state of intoxication, it is evident that he was slugged by some person who bore a grudge against him. He was rendered unconscious and was badly battered and bruised about the head and shoulders. When found early yesterday morning, his face and head were badly swollen and the marks of the blows inflicted and the injuries from the fall were ghastly. He was taken to his home immediately, but later was revived and will recover.

Star Is Removed.
President Will Lewis of the village board who was there Sunday morning when Gilbertson was taken home, removed his star and took away his key, thus leaving the office of marshal vacant on account of the disgraceful occurrence. The village board will hold a meeting at an early date to investigate the matter and to appoint a new marshal.

ENGINEER DUNNE, INJURED AT BARDWELL, IMPROVING SLOWLY

Enroute to Chicago Today—Explains Feelings at Time of Wreck at Bardwell—Still Very Weak.

Engineer James Dunne, who was injured in the wreck at Bardwell on June 27, passed through this city on the eleven o'clock passenger train enroute to Chicago. This is the first time Mr. Dunne has left his home at Madison since he was taken there after his narrow escape from death in the wreck. It will be some time before he will have sufficient strength to resume his duties in the cab.

Mr. Dunne stated that his whole body seemed to have been strained by the shock. His shoulders and chest are very stiff and he cannot raise his hands above his head. During the first day or two after the wreck, according to Mr. Dunne's statement, he felt fairly well and anticipated no trouble. Apparently the fall and shock inflicted injuries to his muscles and nerves that will take some time yet to repair.

He stated that at the time of the fall he thought it was "all over with him," but he "apparently recovered" soon and began fighting his way from beneath the roof of the cab under which he was imprisoned, and he considers it little short of miraculous that he lives today to tell of his experience.

Roundhouse Foreman Charles Swan went to Rockford this morning on company business.

Engineer Weber reported for duty this morning after a vacation of two weeks and will be on duty on the night switch-engine.

With the victory of Saturday their seventh straight win since the beginning of the Commercial League season, the Parker Pen Company has practically clinched the pennant in the league. At the present time the Y. M. C. A. and Chlorine place seem to be the best chances for second place, with the outlook that the race between the two will be close.

The Parkers applied a coat of whitewash to the Hanson Furniture squad in the first game of the double bill at the park Saturday, the game going to the Pennmakers by the score of 16 to 0. The Parkers started the slugfest in the first round, driving in two scores. They kept up the onslaught through the remaining innings, rapping eight hits off Cronin's delivery. Klauser was the heavy hitter of the season making three singles and a home run in five times at bat. Each time he scored men on bases. Dowey's pitching aided the Pennmakers greatly in winning, the Tablemakers connecting with only three of his curves.

It took but four innings for the Y. M. C. A. line to put it over the Gazette players, the four rounds lasting for one hour and a half and as the four was growing late it was decided to end the agony for the spectators and players. The Athletics had things mostly their own way and hit freely. Bad errors by the Printers helped the Y. M. C. A. along. Hyde catching for the Printers had the little finger of his right hand broken and the hamstrings of the hand torn in the game.

PIRATE CREW WAS DEFEATED SUNDAY

Janeville Pirates Lost First Game of Season to Whirlwinds at Park
Yesterday Afternoon.

After winning ten straight games this season the Janeville Pirates lost their first game yesterday afternoon when the Whirlwinds defeated them in a contest at Athletic park, 3 to 2. Only three of the Whirlwinds men were on hand for the game, so recruits were taken from the line-ups of the Cubs and Cardinals to fill out the Whirlwinds' team. The game was a light from start to finish and full of excitement. The Whirlwinds scored the winning run on an error, Sullivan dropping the ball and allowing a Whirlwind runner to slide home. Bugge, pitching for the Pirates, was in fine form, fanning eleven men and giving the Whirlwinds but five hits. O'Hara, twirling for the Whirlwinds, struck out seven, but allowed ten hits. The Pirates may play the Cardinals next Sunday. The line-ups yesterday: Whirlwinds: O'Hara, p; French, c; V. Hemming, 1b; Porter, 2b; Ryan, 3b; Cronin, 3b; Stuart, 4b; W. Hemming, cf; Fulton, rf.

Pirates: Bugge, p; F. Hall, c; King, ss; Cronin, 1b; Carroll, 2b; Sullivan, 3b; Monahan, rf; Cantwell, cf; Otto, lf.

BOY SCOUTS ARE TO HAVE REAL TEST OF FINDING A MESSAGE

Scout Master Has Hidden One and Search May Begin First Thing
Tomorrow Morning.

One of the first real tests for the efficiency of the Boy Scouts of Janeville starts tomorrow morning when the search for the hidden message begins. Scout Master Reeder has hidden the message and the exact description is printed below. It is understood that as soon as the message has been found the Scout will at once report to Mr. Reeder, without saying anything to any one else and the message will be hidden again so that other Scouts may search for it. The search begins Tuesday morning and doubtless many will have their coveted badges by the end of the present week. Read the description carefully and start searching at once.

Boy Scout Game.
Commencing at a point sixty (60) paces from the center of the Soldiers' monument in the Court House Park, the said point indicated by a scout sign carved on some object in said Court House Park and which must be found by the scout before he can get his first bearings and landmarks. Go thence in the general direction indicated by said sign across one of the city streets to another sign which only a scout will understand, thence forward as indicated three blocks in a straight line; then turn to your left at right angles and proceed past the fourth telephone pole on the northerly side of the beaten path, thence past the last pole due east, thence in a straight line South East according to the compass to a stump on the bank about 275 feet distant and if you cannot cross the water conveniently you may have to swim, thence back along the bank toward the North to a barbed wire fence, then along the fence to the east to the corner of said fence, thence East of South East to a medium sized hickory tree, then North East according to the compass between two trees one of which has a ladder nailed on to it, then from there North of North East along the center of a beaten path to a place opposite a large chokecherry tree standing near the path; turn there to the left along another path through the woods and proceed over the brow of the hill along said path to the place where the path ends on a sidewalk thence north one and one half (1 1/2) blocks to the second street crossing, thence West of North West to a large oak tree on which slats have been fastened to make a ladder; thence due North over the brow of a hill to a medium sized locust tree thence in a direct line about North, a little west to an old stump, and if you have found the right stump, and someone has not been there before you, you will probably find the message.

MASS MEETING TO BE HELD TUESDAY AT THE CITY HALL

WORKMAN'S COMPENSATION LAW TO BE FULLY EXPLAINED.

CROWNHART TO SPEAK

Meeting is Open to Employers, Superintendents and Workmen Who Are Interested in Law.

On Tuesday evening there will be a mass meeting at the assembly room of the city hall, at which Chairman Crownhart of the commission which will handle the handling of the new Workmen's Compensation law in charge, will explain the law and its working and answer any questions that may come up. The meeting is at the direct invitation of the Superior Intendents Association and under the auspices of the Industrial and Commercial club. Invitations have been sent to employers and Evansville manufacturers to be present and it is expected a good sized delegation from those cities will be present.

The meeting is open to the public and all who are interested in the law and its working are invited to be present. Prof. John Commons, also a member of the state commission, will be present and will talk on the law. It should prove most interesting and will doubtless attract a large audience.

The following explanation of the law is sent out by the Wisconsin Manufacturers' association and the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association and will doubtless be of interest to those who intend hearing Mr. Crownhart tomorrow evening.

The new Workmen's Compensation act or industrial insurance law enacted by the last legislature will go into effect September 1, 1911. Its constitutionality will be tested in two cases which have been brought before the Supreme Court of the State.

The employers of labor in the state are concerned as to the general operation of the law and as to the experience to be obtained from the same. Many employers are in doubt as to whether to elect to come under the law or to refrain from doing so.

In order to keep the manufacturers and others who may be interested, in the subject fully informed we have obtained an opinion from the attorneys of the associations. From this opinion, which is published herewith, it will be seen that no advice can be given while we are uniformly applicable to or serviceable in each industry.

This opinion, however, discusses the problem quite fully and will enable the individual firm to corporation to arrive at a conclusion whether to file an application to come under the act or whether to ignore the same.

A Legal Opinion.
The law firm of Carpenter & Posa of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has been retained to conduct the test cases. It has also been asked to render an opinion as to the best course to be pursued by employers pending the decision of the Supreme Court. This opinion is given herewith:

"In reply to your inquiry as to whether, in our opinion, the manufacturers of the city and state should elect to become subject to Chapter 50 of the Laws of 1911, (popularly known as the Workmen's Compensation Act), we have to say:

"Two test cases have been brought before the Supreme Court by us in the hope of obtaining speedily a decision concerning the constitutionality of the Act. It goes without saying that these cases cannot be decided prior to September 1st and that they may not be decided for several months afterwards.

"The questions involved are novel and there is an almost total lack of decisions in point; and not only has it been necessary for us, but it will be necessary for the Attorney General to look for cases that are merely analogous, and this means that a hundred cases may be carefully examined before one is found that is in point. The Supreme Court will not hurry the Attorney General as to his brief in answer to ours, and that brief may contain matter making it necessary for us to reply. The questions involved are not only new, but of the utmost importance, and the court will not hurry its decision.

"Under the provisions of this Act the manufacturer may determine whether he will elect to submit to it or not. If he does so elect, all workmen then in his employ who remain in his employ for thirty days afterwards become automatically subject to the Act. All workmen entering his employ after his election become subject to the act unless on making the contract of service they give notice to the contrary.

"On September 1st the defense of assumption of risk and the fellow servant defense are withdrawn from all those manufacturers who have not elected to become subject to the Act, and remain withdrawn until such election is made. The defense of contributory negligence still remains for those who have not elected to become subject to the Act.

"Question of Individual Circumstances.
"Your question, therefore, divides itself into two heads, (1) should the manufacturer become subject to the Act at all and (2) if he be answered in the affirmative, should he make the election immediately, that is to say, by August 1st?

"It seems to us that each individual case must be considered before either question can be answered.

"As to whether manufacturers shall become subject to the Act at all: Many competent authorities believe that if litigation and liability insurance can be wholly eliminated, all industrial accidents may be taken care of according to the scale of compensation provided in this Act, without any increase, at least without any material increase, in what the manufacturer now pays for protection. Of course, this is only a belief, since we are wholly without data to form a judgment on the subject. Possibly each manufacturer, by reviewing his records for the past few years and comparing what he has paid out with what he would have to pay under this Act, can arrive at a general average which will be reasonably accurate as to his particular shop. Nevertheless, all such figures would be discounted by a great catastrophe, such as an explosion practically wrecking the shop; but the likelihood of such an occurrence the individual manufacturer must also determine for himself.

"Liability Insurance To Continue.
"It would seem, in the absence of data that until the comparative liability through perfect liability insurance is made, it is likely to increase the expense of operation considerably during the time of experiment. In addition to this we are advised that the great majority of liability policies now in operation in Wisconsin expressly exclude any payment on account of any workmen's compensation act. Possibly the companies will now write a new form of policy at an increased premium.

"In the last analysis each manufacturer must weigh the matter pro and con and decide what course is likely to add least to his expense of operation.

"As to whether those who intend to submit to the Act if it is declared constitutional should file their election on or before August 1st: The defense of contributory negligence, and as far as the cases that reach the courts of last resort are concerned, the defendant will suffer on this defense than on either of the two that are to be abrogated. Moreover, aside from this Act, the defense of assumption of risk has been somewhat restricted.

"It would seem at first glance, therefore, that the manufacturer who does not wish to submit, might afford to take the risk of waiting a few months for the decision of the Supreme Court.

The Varying of Hazards.
"On the other hand, it is clear that in certain circumstances the negligence of one workman might kill many of his co-workers without any negligence on their part. The manufacturer whose business is of such a nature that this might happen, and who intends to submit if the Act is declared constitutional, might therefore elect by August 1st to come under the Act. Again, it appears to be a matter which must be determined in each individual case.

"For example, we are of opinion that the owners of a powder mill might promptly become subject to the law if they intend ever to become subject to it, but that the owners of a bakery might well wait or until the owners of a foundry where the work is extra hazardous might come under the law promptly if they intend ever to come under it, while the directors of a bank could well afford not to come under it at all.

"We regret that we cannot give you a general answer which will apply in each specific case, but you will readily see the impossibility of that."

CONCLUSIONS TO BE REACHED.

From the foregoing opinion, it will be seen that no definite instructions or advice can be given at this time which may serve as a guide in all lines of manufacturing. Those engaged in the hazardous industries may find it to their advantage to come under the law while those engaged in the non-hazardous industries would find it less advantageous to avail themselves of the provisions of the law.

In conclusion it may be said that whatever the decision of the Supreme Court may be, the principle involved in the law will become a fixed factor in the industrial life of the state and eventually of the nation. Its humane purposes are quite generally recognized and while men may differ as to the various provisions of this particular law it is safe to say eventually a law will be framed which will be acceptable and valid.

ROCK RIVER CLAIMS ITS SECOND VICTIM

JOHN M. O'BRIEN, AGED 23, DROWNED ABOUT SIX O'CLOCK LAST EVENING.

NEAR MAGEE'S POINT

Was Drowned While Attempting To Swim To Shore From Rowboat Which Sank With Him and His Companions.

John M. O'Brien, aged 23, an extra conductor on the Chicago & North Western railroad, was drowned in Rock River near Magee's Point, nine miles upstream about six o'clock last evening.

O'Brien, with Philip Sheridan and Irving Allison were crossing the river in a small rowboat, when about midway in the river, the craft, which had been leaking badly, sank under their weight. Sheridan clung to the boat and Allison, who is an expert swimmer, started to swim to shore. O'Brien, who had the boat, went under and started to swim out, but he began swimming toward the boat again.

Just before he reached the other men, O'Brien began to sink and Allison left the boat and went to his rescue. Allison pulled the drowning man to the surface, but could not hold him up as the weight was too great. A passing launch party, seeing the commotion, stopped their engine and steered toward the two young men.

The momentum of the boat before the engine was stopped carried them past the place where the two were, but as the boat passed the only drowning in the water, one of the men reached over the side and grabbed Allison. The jerk loosened Allison's hold on O'Brien and the latter sank for the last time.

A call for aid to find the drowned man was sent to this city shortly after seven o'clock last evening and Chief of Police Appleby secured a rig and with William McLaughlin and Charles Young to assist him, started up the river. A grappling fork and hooks were taken along. Up the river boats were secured and two parties started to drag the river for the body.

The body was pulled to the surface by McLaughlin about eleven and was found just a short distance from where the unfortunate man sank. The remains were brought to this city in an automobile and taken to Ryan's undertaking rooms.

The death of O'Brien is the second which has resulted this season from drowning in Rock River. Louis Bufalini, aged 23, drowned near the Chautauque grounds on Sunday May 28.

O'Brien, who was promoted a short time ago from brakeman to extra conductor, was well known among the railroad men employed on the Northwestern railroad and was very popular among the young men of this city. He was of a genial disposition and made many friends.

Yesterday morning he, with Sheridan and Will Sage, a conductor on the Northwestern road, went up the river to visit at the camp of James Wilson and other railroad men at Magee's Point. They rode up the east side of the river in Sheridan's automobile and had Allison row them across the stream.

The boat leaked badly going over in the morning and when the party was about to return last evening, it was deemed advisable to make two trips, Sage waiting on the west side of the river for the boat to come back and take him over.

The searching parties were handicapped in their work by the darkness of the night, the moon being hid behind the clouds, but Sage, who joined the searchers, aided them in locating the place where the body sank.

Relatives of the young man are grief-stricken over his loss. Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. O'Brien, 418 South Washington street, he leaves to mourn his loss two sisters, Nellie and Amy, both of this city and his brothers, Robert, William and George O'Brien. He was born December 13, 1888, in this city, and had made his home with his parents. The funeral services will be held Wednesday morning at nine o'clock from St. Patrick's church.

THE (45) BEST BARGAINS FROM OUR (45) BUSIEST STORES

Read Why

We are publishing this extraordinary page of specials

This paper has been studying for some time past the relative importance, interest and appeal the "advertising" of a modern paper should bear to the other "news" set forth in its columns.

(The result is stagger- ing to the reporter and editorial pride.)

It has forcibly come to us that, what interests the world most to-day and has most interested them since the world began, is summed up in—

WHAT TO EAT—WHAT TO WEAR—WHAT TO HAVE IN THE HOME—HOW TO BEST SPEND MONEY TO PROMOTE THE MOST PLEASURE AND HAPPINESS AND COMFORT.

Compared with these great points which vitally concern humanity, the lesser happenings of life are but incidents.

And the person best qualified to interest the people of this city in these matters of most moment are by all means the merchants—the men who are in touch with the world's markets—who know what is being done in the new discoveries and origination of merchandise and food stuffs, to raise standards of living or change modes and styles.

Do the people of this city really appreciate this great truth? Do the merchants appreciate it themselves, is a question this paper has been asking itself and also the question—

HOW CAN THIS PAPER HELP bring a closer confidence and sense of mutual understanding and benefit between advertiser and the public?

In answer to this question THIS PAPER HAS SET ASIDE THIS SPACE for one day each week and has asked the merchants of this city to contribute

(What in their opinion will be their (one) most appealing bargain.)

Moreover, we mean to devote this space one day each week to announcing these "best" bargains. We also mean to protect our merchants and our readers in the sincerity of all offerings, and so we will appoint a competent shopping committee to each week inspect all "best" bargain offerings and decide which is the ONE BEST BARGAIN OF ALL the decision of the committee to be published in the ad of the week following the insertion of the "best bargains."

45 Merchants Have Responded— some with price cuts, some with "new arrivals," some with style novelties, some with unique originations, some with offerings possessing more than ordinary appeal to eye, palate, or ear.

This Ad Is Bound to Contain many things to interest and appeal to every reader of this paper—many needed items at a big saving, many wanted things, many new suggestions; and so, even if you haven't a need, desire or wish unfulfilled at the present time, the reading of this ad and the succeeding ads will be well worth your while in developing your discernment, just for the interest and satisfaction of determining in advance in your own mind the "bargain" which the committee will select as "best," your faculty for picking out real bargains when you see them—and also because these announcements from every point of view are bound to make

The most interesting reading of any page in today's paper

The T. J. Ziegler Clothing Co.

With their offering of regular value $15 and $18 suits for men and young men for $9 on Saturday, July 22nd, was awarded the honor of "Best Bargain" by the committee of ladies from the Ladies' Aid Society of the Cargill M. E. Church, after visiting the 42 stores.

Was this the Bargain you decided was best last week?

Did you read and respond to that bargain page—you certainly missed the most interesting reading in the paper if you happened to overlook it—But here is another—just as brimful of interest to you—read every special—perhaps the very item you need most is set forth here the most extraordinary offering on the page.

The Committee this week consists of three ladies from the Westminster Guild of the Presbyterian Church.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

I AM perpetually urged by correspondents to write on matters of etiquette. Now, I can't write on the fine points and elaborate distinctions, because I do not know them well enough. I'm just a plain person. You'll have to go to the etiquette books for that.

But from what I have seen of the manners of the younger generation, it seems to me that a few reminders of the "do's and don'ts" of everyday politeness—those things which everybody knows and yet which almost everybody apparently forgets occasionally—would not come amiss.

I'll give the men their dose first, because I honestly think—no feminine prejudice, truly—that they need it most.

A FEW ETIQUETTE "DO'S AND DON'TS" FOR THE MASCULINE SEX.

Never smoke when on the street with a woman. Never smoke when in the room with women, no matter how well you know them, without asking their permission.

When you are smoking, never talk with your pipe between your teeth. Always remove your hat in a room where there are women. Yes, I know that an elevator is not so very different from a street car, and men keep their hats on there, and I know that women's hats often annoy you more than yours possibly can them. I have been informed of these and all the other arguments on the subject before, but you see, I didn't establish the custom. Convention did that and she still favors it.

Never just touch your hat. The true gentleman always lifts it well off his head.

Never take a woman's arm in the street. If you wish to assist her you should offer her your arm, but that is not customary except at night or if she is aged or infirm.

When you are with a woman always get off a car before her, so that you may help her off.

Never clean your nails or pick your teeth in the presence of your intimate friends any more than you would in public. It is just as unpleasant to them to have to see you as to the general public, and surely you owe them as much consideration. (Will the people who think that warbling is not needed anyway please watch and see how many really decent looking men they see offending that way.)

Always rise when a woman enters the room where you are calling and remain standing until she is seated.

In the theatre if an usher helps you find the seat, let the lady precede you. Otherwise you precede her.

Don't sit in a street car with your feet stretched out in front of you where people will be apt to tumble over them. That is selfish and dangerous, as well as ill bred.

At the table always remain standing behind your chair until your hostess is seated. I think it is a charming bit of domestic ceremony when this custom is carried out in the home circle and the father and children remain standing until the mother is seated.

There, I guess that's enough for one day. Please excuse this reversal of the conventional order of things. I explained the reason for it above.

By the way, here's a suggestion for the feminine contingent. If "himself" offends in any of these particulars and you don't quite like to speak about it openly, why not clip this and mail it to him.

A newspaper clipping to the wife is sufficient.

The Feature Editor wants to thank all the contestants for their work and energy in preparing articles and hopes that they will find it agreeable to enter future contests. While not all who have presented their ideas for home entertainment during the summer will not be favored with one of the prizes, their efforts will be appreciated as much by the Feature Editor as those of the prize winners.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN, Food Specialist

NUTRITION AND CANCER.

Dr. Emory Lamphere, who has had much experience with cancer, says that the local irritation, whether bruise or pipe-stem or germ, is not the cause of the disease, and in speaking of "the dependence of cancer growth upon the amount of nutrition received (General Practitioner, May) he hints at the nutritional theory explained in these articles. Recent investigations have shown that a cancer parasite attacks plants, and Luther Burbank has called attention to the fact in his book "The Human Plant," that when plants are fed an unbalanced ration, they are "easily attacked by fungus growths," and it is worthy of note that the vegetable cancer was first observed on hot-house daisies. We know now that consumption attacks only those whose nutrition is defective through bad feeding and lack of proper air, light, exercise and right mental conditions, and the same will prove to be true of cancer, which is still the subject of earnest investigation.

VERY occupation lifts itself with the enlarging life of him who practices it. The occupation that will not do that, no man or woman really has a right to occupy him or herself about.

THE SUNDAY DINNER.

The Sunday dinner in most homes is a little more elaborate than an ordinary dinner, as there is no need for hurry, and the family are all at home to enjoy it. For the busy mother with no one to help her, a big Sunday dinner has no especial charm, for she needs the day of rest as much as any member of the family. One may have a roast that has been cooked the day before and reheated for Sunday, or a veal loaf may be prepared and served cold. The salad may be all ready to put together on Saturday, and a dessert, like custard, or a frozen dish kept in the fireless cooker for dessert. A fireless cooker is a wonderful help in the servantless home.

A dish of mashed potatoes may be quickly prepared by heating cold boiled potatoes in boiling water for a few minutes, then mash and season.

For the Sunday night lunch, let the man of the house prepare it. Most men think it great fun, and are especially proud when proficiency rewards their efforts.

Begin with simple things at first. Like the making of dainty sandwiches, the preparation of tea or cocoa, and gradually lead up to rabbit and omelets. A nice Sunday night sandwich which is very well liked is one made by spreading buttered bread out in rounds, with butter, then add cheese that has been grated and softened with cream. Put together sandwich fashion and fry in butter until well browned on both sides.

Serve these sandwiches on a plate of lettuce leaves with a cup of cocoa and a dish of fruit and a small cake, and you have a most appetizing lunch, easy to prepare.

A substantial foundation upon which to build a good, healthful body and a vigorous mind is in using discretion as to the bread your family consumes. The Candid Girl by Barbara Boyd

Tells Some Commuters the Trials of a Conductor.

I WAS sitting on the last seat in the car," said the Candid Girl, as she joined the group on the porch," and the conductor was in the little cubby hole back of this seat, counting his tickets and talking to a friend. Maybe we didn't all get roasted."

"What did he say?" asked one of the Commuters.

"He said he wished people would have their tickets ready when they came into the car. He said he yelled 'Tickets, please,' at the top of his lungs when he entered each car; and then at about every other person, he'd have to stand and wait while they'd fish their ticket out of their pocket or dig it out of a handbag. He said he'd be coming along the aisle punching tickets as fast as he could, and yet here'd be a man so absorbed in reading his paper that he'd have to tap him on the shoulder and say 'Tickets,' and behind him two women talking so hard and fast, he would have to tell them twice he wanted their tickets, and then wait while they hunted all through their handbags for them."

"Two of the women glanced guiltily at each other, and one of the men said, 'Huh! Ain't it his business to get tickets?'"

"Well," said the Candid Girl, guilelessly, "he went on to say that it takes quick work to collect the tickets before the first stop, and that all these hold-ups put a man in a stew."

"Then, he said, there was always a bunch who never have their tickets, and every one of them would give him a large bill. He wanted to know if they took him for the cashier of a bank. Then, he said, when he didn't bring their change back right away, they'd want to know where their money was, and look at him as if they thought he was pretending to forget it. He said women until they had to get off and wouldn't have time to get it. He said women always think he is not going to bring their change before they get off, no matter if they are going to the end of the line. 'Poor conductor!'" said the Candid Girl with a tender little smile. "He does have a hard time."

"Then he said there was always a lot who wanted the windows fixed. It didn't matter which way the windows were, they wanted them different. If the windows were up, they wanted them down; and if they were down, they wanted them up. He said when he saw a woman's hand go toward the window, he knew he might just as well fix it, for it wouldn't be long before she would be at him."

"Well, you do want the windows down sometimes," said one of the women on the porch.

"Of course you do," responded another, "or up."

"He said a lot more," said the Candid Girl, "about how some people always ask a dozen times if the train stops at a certain station, and others swear a child isn't twelve when one glance will show he is fourteen, and how if the train stops for a little while, everybody wants to know what's the matter. He said when a train stops that way, he just wants to go and hide. People fire questions at him until life isn't worth living. Of course," concluded the Candid Girl, "it cultivates a lot of patience, but then it's all wasted."

"What?" exclaimed the listeners.

"Of course. If we didn't all do these things, he wouldn't need the patience. It isn't a thing he needs himself. He has to have it because of us."

"I am afraid that if we didn't do these things, we would be ready for wings and a halo," said one of the women.

"Well," responded the Candid Girl, rising to go, "they'd be a lot more becoming than a hobble skirt and a hatbrim down to your chin."

A POWERFUL SERMON BY REV. LAUGHLIN

ADDRESSED UNION MEETING OF CHURCHES IN THE METHO-DIST CHURCH.

GAVE A FINE MESSAGE

Spoke From the Text, "Acquaint
Now Thyself With Him and be at Peace"—Sermon Very Vital.

At the union service of the churches, held Sunday evening in the Methodist church, Rev. J. W. Laughlin, of the Presbyterian church, preached from the text, "Acquaint now thyself with him and be at peace, and there by good shall come to thee."

"Although this was spoken to Job," said Dr. Laughlin, "it seems to have a twentieth century ring to it, and seems applicable to the present day. But there are difficulties in getting acquainted with God. One of these difficulties is that God seems so incomprehensible to us. God is infinite, while we are finite. His name has been on our lips since we were children, and we ought to know Him. We know about the earth, for we have measured it; we know about the sea, the sky, the stars; but when we think of God we put our hands to our lips, and with our faces in the dust cry: 'Who can know God?'"

"Another difficulty in getting acquainted with God is that he cannot be seen. But that is no argument against his existence. There are many, many things that no one has seen. Who has ever seen the soul? The doctors can cut in a man's body but they cannot find his soul. We have never seen the wind. And there are a thousand other things that we have never seen, but we know they exist."

"But how do we know that God exists if we can neither comprehend him or see him? I say because the Bible says so. But on what authority does the Bible say that? Because its authority is divine, so that its reasoning in a circle, so we won't go into the long arguments now."

"Can we argue from the things that we can see? Whence come the stars, the hills, the rivers, the buildings? Our hearts say from God. The Bible says from God. Reason says from God. But there are not the greatest mysteries. Man is the greatest of them all. He has the power to build, to construct, to invent himself into things. When we think of man's wonderful power, we know that there must be some greater power behind him. It must be God; and the Bible says that God said, 'Let us make man in our image and likeness.'"

"There are many different thoughts of God. The first one is the savage's thought of a great creative power. When he looked about him and saw the wonderful things of the earth, he thought that there must be a God who created them. And when he saw the lightning and the thunder in the heavens, he thought that this must be a terrible God as well, and sought to appease him with offerings. He tried to get on the good side of God. And it is the same thing now. Rivers have run red with the blood of sacrificed victims. When the savage stole captives from his neighbor he offered up the best to his God. So now, when a man exploits his neighbor and robs him, he feels like building a library or a church or a university that he may feel justified in exploiting his neighbor."

"But gradually we have grown away from this old idea, and have come to think of God as the Father, and the kind power above us which has given us all our civilization. You may say that this is the outgrowth of the twentieth century, but I point you to Africa, to China, where it is the 20th century but there is no civilization, and no in everything, where there is trust in God and we become acquainted with him and with ourselves we are happy and at peace."

PASSING OF FORMER WEATHER TERM SEEN

"Humid" Has Taken the Place of
"Muggy" in Up-To-Date Parlance on Weather Topics.

"Fifty years ago," said the middle-aged man, "close, sticky weather was commonly described as muggy. No body ever said 'humid' or spoke of the humidity in the air."

"Scientific persons knew then, as everybody does now, the cause of the air's seeming closeness and stickiness, but the common people, of whom I was one, did not. We all in those days described close, sticky weather as muggy."

"But the present generation knows 'muggy' not at all. Everybody now knows that the closeness and the stickiness are due to excessive moisture in the atmosphere, to high humidity in a high temperature; this is as far as it goes exact present day knowledge being due to the establishment of the weather service and to the widespread dissemination of its reports through the daily newspapers. Now, whether we realize it or not, we all have a scientific knowledge of the cause of this weather condition and now we all say 'humid' and 'humidity,' not 'muggy' or 'mugginess.'"

"And so that good old word 'muggy,' once in universal use, has now passed into all but total disuse. It is rarely heard; never indeed except as it may be spoken instinctively or reminiscently by the older inhabitants."

INTERESTING DATA ON HIGHWAY WORK AS TO STATE AID

Wisconsin State Highway Commission
Sends Out Circular Letter To the Different Town Chairmen.

The legislature of 1911 passed a law (Chapter 337, Laws of 1911) creating a state highway commission and providing for a system of prospective state highways. An annual appropriation of $550,000 was made for the purpose of providing state aid in 1912 and succeeding years to those towns and counties which vote taxes for the improvement of any road or bridge on the system of prospective state highways.

The new law makes little change in the present system in those counties which have been doing work under the county aid laws of 1907, except that it adds the state as a contributor to the cost of construction, and gives to the state highway commission sufficient authority to insure that the state's money is wisely and economically spent. In those counties which have taken no action under the 1907 laws, it will be necessary for the county board to take action under this law at the November, 1911 session, if any part of the state aid fund is desired for construction in 1912.

The Commission is very desirous of assisting the towns and counties in every possible manner, and takes this method of letting each town chairman know what his town must do in order to get county and state aid for road or bridge construction in 1912. Each town will fall in one or more of the following classes:

Class I: Towns which have voted a tax for county aid road construction in 1912. No further action by the voters of the town is necessary.

Class II: Towns in class I which have borrowed the money and built their road in 1911. No part of the state aid fund for 1912 is available for work done in 1911. Such towns will have to follow the course outlined for towns in class 3.

Class III: Towns which have not voted a tax for county aid road construction in 1912. Such towns can vote a tax of not less than $100 for road construction or not less than $250 for bridge construction, or both, at a special town meeting.

Class IV: Towns which have voted a tax for county aid road construction in any year previous to 1912 and have the proceeds of such tax in the town treasury. These towns can get county and state aid in 1912 if they vote at a special town meeting to devote such proceeds to state aid construction.

Class V: Towns which have voted a tax to build a county aid bridge in 1912. Such towns can, by voting at a special town meeting to devote the proceeds of the tax to state aid construction, get county and state aid if the bridge is built in 1912.

General Requirements Applying To Towns in Every Class: If the state fund is sufficient the state pays 33 1/3 percent of the cost of roads and 20 percent of the cost of bridges. Unless the county boards fix a lower percentage the county and the town share equally the remainder of the cost.

County and state aid is available not only for building stone and gravel roads, but for the permanent improvement of earth roads as well, and for building any bridge over six feet in span. All roads and bridges voted to be improved must lie on the system of prospective state highways. If the county has no system the town can vote a tax and the town board shall select the road or bridge to be improved after the county board selects a system. Special town meetings must be held on or before September 1st. Town boards must petition the county board through the county clerk on or before September 1st. Petitions should state the amount of tax voted and give a description of the road or bridge to be constructed.

Counties which wish to build a road in 1912 with county and state funds alone must vote a county tax for the purpose at a special meeting of the county board held on or before October 1st.

The Commission will gladly answer any question concerning features of the law not explained in this necessarily short letter. It has in preparation a bulletin containing the law in full together with notes on and explanations of its various provisions, which will be sent to you at an early date. Until the bulletin is available it would be well to consult the law itself, now generally available in newspaper supplement form.

NOTES FOR CITY FARMERS ONLY.

(By H. L. RANN.)

With all respect for wearers of the cloth, we advise against buying a jack that carries around endorsements from a minister of the gospel.

We know a man who bought a jack from a clergyman friend who guaranteed that the children could use his step-ladder, and in a week the animal had scattered the remnants of a large and growing family over two miles and a half of rock-crushed road. We would sooner trust our anatomy to the tender mercies of a drunken corn shredder than face the raty action of a sleepy-eyed mule which was once the member of a preacher's family. Despite the fact that the average preacher doesn't know a jack from a jackpot, we notice that when it comes to a horse trade he can paint rings around any other class of our citizenship.

You can never fatten a short-whiskered gelding on rusty hay. You might as well feed him talcum powder. After a horse has stepped himself in dusty hay, his lungs will shrink faster than a new set of underclothes after a hard rain. A roadster which has acquired the reputation of being a runner is about as valuable as a second-hand cannibal. Many a man has had to have his ear drums held in place with safety-pins after a drive behind a roarer. We had a neighbor who tried to make love behind a broad mare with asthma, and when he popped the question it sounded like opening a small cold bottle in a roller mill. A flat-chested gelding should always be fed baled hay soaked in cod liver oil, which will lubricate his bellows as well as his gut.

The colt which persists in kicking face the rotary action of a sleepy-eyed eye day or two should be curried with a 2x12 scumming, applied across the posterior organism before every meal. A kicking colt can drive more men to the nearest saloon, in passing a given point, than any other article of furniture on the farm.

Light can't spoil Schlitz in Brown Bottles

It is not enough to make pure beer, it must be kept pure until it is poured into your glass. Beer is a saccharine product. The slightest taint of impurity injures its healthfulness. Light starts decay even in pure beer. Dark glass, the scientists say, gives protection against light.

Purity above everything else distinguishes Schlitz beer from common beer.

We use the costliest materials—we age Schlitz for months to prevent biliousness—it will not ferment in your stomach.

Schlitz is sent to you in Brown Bottles, thus protecting Schlitz purity from the brewery to your glass.

Without all these precautions no beer can be healthful, and who knowingly would drink beer that was not?

If you knew what we know about beer, you would say, "Schlitz—Schlitz in Brown Bottles."

The Taming of Red Butte Western

by FRANCIS LYND

Copyright, 1911, by Charles E. Lynde

The assertion was quite true. With Dawson, the trainmaster, and another sturdy Jackson for horses, there was no need of a fourth. Yet intuition or whatever masculine thing it is that stands for intuition prompted Lidgerwood to say:

"I don't know that I ought to leave. I've just come out from Angels, you know."

But the president was not to be felled.

"Climb up here and quit trying to find excuses. We'll give you a better luncheon than you'll get out of the dinner table, and if you carry yourself handsomely you may get a dinner invitation after you get in. That ought to tempt any man who has to live in Angels the year round."

Lidgerwood marked the persistent plural of the personal pronoun, and a great fear laid hold upon him. None the less, the president's invitation was a little like the king's—it was in some sense a command. Lidgerwood merely asked for a moment's respite and went down to announce his intention to McCloskey and Dawson. Curiously enough, the draftsman seemed to be trying to ignore the private car. His back was turned upon it, and he was glooming out across the bare hills, with his square jaw set, as if the ignoring effort were painful.

"I'm going back to Angels with the president," said the superintendent, speaking to both of them. "You can clean up here without me."

The trainmaster nodded, but Dawson seemed not to have heard. At all events, he made no sign. Lidgerwood turned and ascended the embankment, only to have the sudden reluctance assail him again as he put his foot on the truck of the Nalla to mount to the platform. The hesitation was only momentary this time. Other guests Mr. Brewster might have without including the one person whom he would circle the globe to avoid.

"Good boy!" said the president when Lidgerwood swung over the high hand-rail and leaned out to give Williams the starting signal. And when the scene of the wreck was withdrawing into the rearward distance the president felt for the doorknob, saying, "Let's go inside, where we shan't be obliged to see so much of this God forsaken country at one time."

One-half minute later the superintendent would have given much to be safely back with McCloskey and Dawson at the vanishing curve of scrap heaps. In that half minute Mr. Brewster had opened the car door and Lidgerwood had followed him across the threshold.

The comfortable lounging room of the Nalla was not empty, nor was it peopled by a group of Mr. Brewster's associates in the copper combine, the alternative upon which Lidgerwood had hopefully hung the "we's" and the "us's."

Seated on a wicker divan drawn out to face one of the wide side windows were two young women, with a curly-headed, clean-faced young man between them. A little farther along, a rather austere lady, whose pose was of calm superiority to her surroundings, looked up from her magazine to say, "Hello, are you here?" Just beyond the austere lady and dozing in his chair, while his hand was on his forehead, was a man whose strong, marked features proclaimed him the father of one of the young women on the divan.

And in the farthest corner of the open compartment, facing each other companionably in an S-shaped double chair, were two other young people, a man and a woman. Truly, the heavens had fallen, for the young woman filling half of the chair was that one person whom Lidgerwood would have circled the globe to avoid meeting.

Lidgerwood meant to obey his first impulse, which prompted him to follow Mr. Brewster to the private office stateroom in the forward end of the car. But the triumphantly beautiful young woman in the nearer half of the crooked-backed seat would by no means sanction any such easy solution of the difficulty.

"Not a word for me, Howard?" she protested, rising and fairly compelling him to stop and speak to her. Then, "For pity's sake! What have you been doing to yourself to make you look so hollow-eyed and anxious? Possibly you will shake hands a little less abstractedly with Mr. Van Lew. Herbert, this is Howard Lidgerwood, my cousin several times removed. He is the tyrant of the Red Butte Western, and I can assure you that he is much more terrible than he looks, aren't you, Howard?"

"Glad to meet you, Mr. Lidgerwood, I'm sure," said the tall young man, gripping the given hand until Lidgerwood winced. "Miss Eleanor has been telling me about you—marooned out here in the Red desert."

"Papa says there is a hotel at Angels called the Celestial," said Miss Brewster. "Do you live at the Celestial, Howard?"

"No, I never properly lived there. I existed there for a few weeks until Mrs. Dawson took pity on me."

"Dear him!" scoffed Miss Eleanor, still mocking. "Tell me, Howard, is Mrs. Dawson a charming young widow?"

"Mrs. Dawson is a very charming middle-aged widow, with a grown son and a daughter," said Lidgerwood, a little stiffly. It seemed entirely unnecessary that she should ridicule him before the athletes.

"And the daughter—is she charming too?"

"Miss Dawson is quite beneath your definition of charming, I imagine," was Lidgerwood's rather crisp rejoinder. And for the third time he made as if he would go on to join the president in the office stateroom.

"You are staying to luncheon with us, aren't you?" asked Miss Brewster, "or do you just drop in and out again, like the other kind of angels?"

"Your father commands me, and he says I am to stay. And now, if you will excuse me—"

This time he succeeded in getting away and up to the luncheon hour talked copper and copper prospects to Mr. Brewster in the seclusion of the president's office compartment. The call for the midday meal had been given when Mr. Brewster switched suddenly from copper to silver.

"By the way, there were a few silver strikes over in the Timanyons about the time of the Red Butte gold excitement," he remarked. "Some of them have grown to be shippers, haven't they?"

"Only two of any importance," replied the superintendent—"the Ruby, in Ruby gulch, and Flemister's Wire Silver, at Little Butte. You couldn't call either of them a bonanza, but they are both shipping fair ore in good quantities."

"Flemister," said the president reflectively—"he's a character. Know him personally, Howard?"

"A little," the superintendent admitted. "A little is plenty. It wouldn't pay you to know him very well," laughed the big man good naturedly. "He has a somewhat paralyzing way of getting next to you financially. I knew him in the old Leadville days—a born gentleman in manner and also a born buccannier. If the men he has held up and robbed were to stand in a row they'd fill a Denver street. Is he alone in the mine?"

"I don't know that he has any partners. Somebody told me when I first came over here that Gridley, our miner mechanic, was in with him, but Gridley says that is a mistake—that he thinks too much of his reputation to be Flemister's partner."

"Thank Gridley," mused the president—"Thank Gridley and his reputation." It would certainly be a pity if that were to get corroded in any way. There is a man who properly belongs to the stone age, what you might call an elemental scoundrel.

"Ever hear of the story of his marriage? No? Remind me of it some time and I'll tell you. But we were speaking of Flemister. You say the Wire Silver has turned out pretty well?"

"Very well, indeed, I believe. Flemister seems to have money to burn."

"He always has—his own or somebody else's. It makes little difference to him. The way he got the Wire Silver would have made Black Beard, the pirate, turn green with envy. Know anything about the history of the mine?"

Lidgerwood shook his head. "Well, I do just happen to. You know how it lies on the western slope of Little Butte ridge?"

"Yes."

"That is where it lies now. But the original openings were made on the eastern slope of the butte. They didn't pan out very well, and Flemister began to look for a vein to whom he could sell. About that time a man whose name I can never recall took up a claim on the western slope of the ridge directly opposite Flemister. This man struck it pretty rich, and Flemister began to bully him on the plea that the new discovery was only a continuation of his own vein straight through the hill. You can guess what happened."

"Fairly well," said Lidgerwood. "Flemister lured the other man out."

"He did worse than that. He drove straight into the hill, past his own lode and actually took the money out of the other man's mine to use as a fighting fund. Flemister put the other man to the wall in the end. There was some domestic tragedy involved, too, in which Flemister played the devil with the other man's family, but I don't know any of the details."

Just then the waiter opened the door a second time to say that luncheon was served.

"Don't forget to remind me that I'm to tell you Gridley's story, Howard," said the president, rising out of the depths of his lounging chair and stripping off the dust coat. "Reminds like a romance, only I fancy it was anything but a romance for poor Lizzie Gridley. Let's go and see what the cook has done for us."

At luncheon Lidgerwood was made known to the other members of the private car party. The white-haired old man who had been dozing in his chair was Judge Holcombe, Van Lew's uncle and the father of the prettier of the two young women who had been entertaining Jeffers, the curly-headed collegian. Jeffers laughingly disclaimed relationship with anybody. But Miss Carolyn Doty, the less pretty but more talkative of the two young women, confessed that she was a cousin twice removed of Mrs. Brewster.

Quite naturally Lidgerwood sought to join the younger people when the table gathering was complete and was not entirely certain of his predilection. Eleanor Brewster and Van Lew sat together and were apparently absorbed in each other to the exclusion of all things extraneous. Jeffers had Miss Doty for a companion, and the affliction of her well-balanced tongue seemed to affect neither his appetite nor his enjoyment of what the young woman had to say.

Miriam Holcombe had fallen to Lidgerwood's lot, and at first he thought that her silence was due to the fact that young Jeffers had got upon the wrong side of the table. But after she began to talk he changed his mind.

"Tell me about the wrecked train we passed a little while ago, Mr. Lidgerwood," she began, almost abruptly. "Was any one killed?"

"No. It was a freight, and the crew escaped. It was a rather narrow escape, though, for the engineer and fireman."

"We saw you go down to speak to two of your men, one who wore his hat pulled down over his eyes and made dreadful faces at you as he talked—"

"That was McCloskey, our trainmaster," he cut in. "And the other?"

"Was wrecking boss No. 2," he told her, "my latest apprentice and a very promising young subject. This was his first time out under my administration, and he put McCloskey and me out of the running at once."

"What did he do?" she asked. He saw a wistfulness in her eyes and wondered at it.

"I couldn't explain it without being unparaphrased technical. But perhaps it can best be summed up in saying that he is a fine mechanical engineer, with the added gift of knowing how to handle men."

"You are generous, Mr. Lidgerwood, to—to a subordinate. He ought to be very loyal to you."

"He is. And I don't think of him as a subordinate. I am glad to be able to call him my friend, Miss Holcombe."

"He college, Mr. Lidgerwood—do you chance to know where he was graduated?"

At another moment Lidgerwood might have wondered at the young woman's persistence, but now Benson's story of Dawson's terrible misfortune was crowding all purely speculative thoughts out of his mind.

"He took his engineering course in Carnegie, but I believe he did not stay through the four years," he said gravely.

ster's right. When she spoke again the personal note was gone, and after that the talk, what there was of it, was of the sort that is meant to bridge discomforting gaps.

CHAPTER XIV.

"THE OTHER MAN."

In the dispersal after the meal Lidgerwood attached himself to Miss Doty, this in sheer self-defense lest Eleanor Brewster should seek to reopen a certain spring of bitterness at which he had been constrained to drink deeply and miserably in the past.

The self-defensive expedient served its purpose admirably. While the others were occupied in various ways, Miss Brewster and Van Lew were absorbed in a book of plays, and their corner of the large open compartment was the one farthest removed from the double divan which Lidgerwood had chosen for Miss Carolyn and himself.

Later Van Lew rolled a cigarette and went to the smoking compartment, which was in the forward end of the car, and when next Lidgerwood broke Miss Doty's eye hold upon him Miss Brewster had also disappeared into her stateroom, as he supposed. Taking this as a sign of his release, he gently broke the thread of Miss Carolyn's inquisitiveness and went out to the rear platform for a breath of fresh air and succor from the fastidious of a neatly balanced tongue.

When it was quite too late to retreat he found the deep recessed obscure platform of the Nalla occupied. Miss Brewster was not in her stateroom, as he had mistakenly presumed himself. She was sitting in one of the two platform camp chairs, and she was alone.

"I thought you would come," he said quite coolly. "Did you find Carolyn very persuasive?"

"I thought you had gone to your stateroom. I hadn't the slightest idea that you were out here."

"Otherwise you would not have come? How magnificently childish you can be upon occasion, Howard!" She pushed the other chair toward him, "Sit down and tell me how you have been enduring the interval. It is more than a year, isn't it?"

The Skin and Not the Blood.

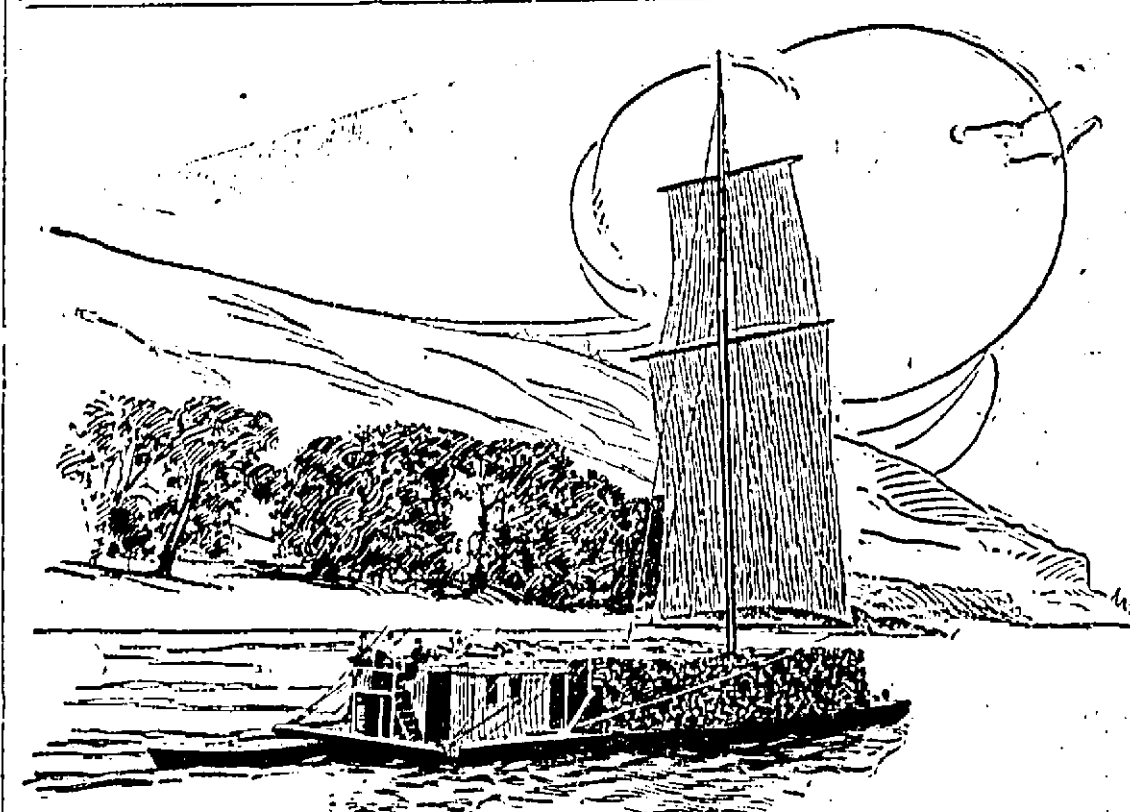

Until recently it has been a generally accepted proposition that eczema was a disease of the blood, and that in order to cure it, the blood must be purified and enriched by internal remedies. Careful experiments and scientific investigations have taught us that eczema is purely a skin disease, and curable through the skin alone. A great majority of persons afflicted with eczema have no other ailment, which is accepted as positive proof that it is purely a skin disease. Having established this fact, the chemists of the American Drug and Press Association set about to compound a prescription that would successfully cope with this disease, and after much investigating brought out Meritol Eczema Remedy, the effect of which is marvellous. If you are afflicted with this loathsome disease, do not delay trying Meritol Eczema Remedy. You will be surprised at its prompt action, its soothing effect and its permanent results. MIGHT FORM A PARTY OF THEIR OWN.

Washington, D. C.—When Hoke Smith, the senator-elect, arrived at the national capital to take his seat, he will be welcomed by a host of friends, who he has long been a national figure and is well known at the capital. Among his friends there are eight who will register particularly because his name is Smith. They are going to form a Smith club and in fact, with their namesakes, might form a national party. There are at present, not including Senator-elect Hoke Smith, eight Smiths in congress. In the upper branch three, and in the House, five. The club will be the Georgian, and the club will be the Georgian, and the club will be the Georgian. Of the nine Smiths in congress, three are from Michigan. Politics are about equally divided with the majority vote cast by Hoke Smith favoring the democrats.
